CURRENCY AND FINANCE.

The House adopted a new section that the mustering in of a substitute shall exempt the principal for the whole time for which he was drafted. Without finishing the bill—adjourned.

The Decline of gold. It goes down regularly and steadily, just as public confidence in the overthrow of the Rebellion goes up. Every Union reverse puts it up. But it is going down and gold—every Union reverse puts it up. But it is

In other words, while we like Greenbacks and National bank notes, and hope to see them still freely circulated, we wish to see every dollar of them mean a dollar, and be worth the

> There are those who talk as though these must all go out of circulation if we resume Specie Payment. Then why don't the notes of the Banks of France and England go out of circulation, since every one of them is redeemable in coin? We protest against any confusion of Paper Money with Irredeemable Currency. We are advocates of redeemable Paper Money, and protest against the above association as disreputable.

> But some fancy that American Manufactures age from an Irredeemable Currency. This we do not and cannot comprehend. Suppose we were to enact that fifty cents should be reckoned and considered a dollar, what good would that do? Of course, debtors would be helped at the expense of creditors; but only so far as regarded their existing debts. The moment they come to buying more goods, they would have to pay just twice so many dollars as before: the actual cost of those goods would neither be increased nor diminished one stiver.

But The Times prefers a gradual to a precipitate decline in currency values, and thinks the country could best abide that sort. We dissent most decidedly. If such reduction must be, we hold it every way preferable that it should be instantaneous. In so far as our nominal dollars are but half-dollars, we hold that they cannot too soon be brought to the standard of reality.

But this, The Times says, "World ruin thousands of our most thriving and declining as our Currency appreciates-there is not a doubt of it. But how will that "ruin" him, unless he has bought them on credit? But we deny that a return to complete notice that the evacuation was a fact caused by the movement of Gen. Cox, which turned the fort and threatened to cut off its communication with Wilmington.

The few troops left in the town have gene to join the gathering forces of Beauregard in front of Gen. Sherman. But it would be a mistake to suppose any considerable number is thus released. Since the capture of Fort Fisher by Gen. Terry, the surrender of Wilmington has been a foreseen necessity to the Rebels, and it will be found that Gen. Schofield garners only the empty husks of what was once a fruit.

But we deny that a return to complete solveney "would sweep the business of the business of the business of the country like a hurricane." What "business" would it thus "sweep?" Not that of The great mass of our farmers, manufacturers, and other producers of wealth. Admit that the barrel of Gen. Sherman.
